Students Writes...

In the halls of medicine, I roam,
Where knowledge and wisdom are grown,
An endless sea of information,
And life-saving skills in our formation.
From anatomy to pharmacology,
We study with unwavering curiosity,
With each new lesson, we're enriched,
And a thirst for knowledge is switched.
From early mornings to late-night calls,
Our passion for medicine never stalls,
We witness the fragility of life,
And the art of healing in its strife.
We learn to listen, empathise, and care,
And that the human touch is rare,
To respect the diverse needs of patients,
And heal their wounds with benevolence.
Through exams, rotations, and clinics,
We face challenges, but never panic,
For every mistake, we own and learn,
And in the end, it's the patient's trust we earn.

In the lessons of medicine, we find,
That knowledge and compassion are intertwined,
That healing is not just a science,
But an art that requires resilience.
As I leave these hallowed halls,
And embark on life's unforeseen calls,
I take with me the lessons of medicine,
To heal, to comfort, and to listen.
